The opening was said to be considerably above low water mark and a disagreeable and sickening odor arises from the fifth accumulated along the river bank. Resolved, That we have heard with deep regret and sorrow of the death of Marshal Hedlin after an exciting day spent in the interest of our people.

When great danger threatened and while yet in the fullness of manhood he quietly laid down his mantle of duty to "sleep the sleep that knows no waking."

He was by nature peculiarly fitted for the official duties of the office he so long and so well filled and we fully appreciate his valuable service in the interest of law and order in our community. As a public sentinel he kept an ever faithful vigil over the lives, homes and property of our citizens. As a detective he was brave, fair and fearless in the discharge of duty and his success in convicting many of the worst criminals in the land made him famous as the foe of evil doers and the friend of law and order.

We honored him in life and give this testimonial of respect to his memory as a brave officer and a true man.

Resolved, That the members of Council in session assembled tender to the family of the deceased our condolence and sympathy in their bereavement.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes, published in the city papers and an official copy of same be presented to the family of our departed friend.

Labadie-Rowell.

Those persons who enjoy theatrical entertainments of the higher class will enjoy a rare treat at Washington Opera-house to-morrow night.

That noble drama "Ingomar" will be presented by the famous Labadie-Rowell Company of talented artists—Francis Labadie as Ingomar and Miss Hattie Rowell in the role of Parthenia.

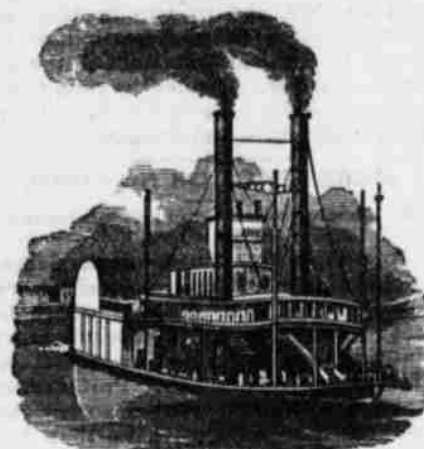

The Washington (Pa.) Observer says: Mr. Francis Labadie as Ingomar, made a fine impression as he grew in favor from the start to the finish. He is strong in tragedy and his facial expression is something attractive. Miss Hattie Rowell as Parthenia supported Mr. Labadie ably. Her personation of the sweet Greek girl is that which appeals to her audience strongly. The rest of the company gave good support to the leading parts.

Seats now on sale at Nelson's. Prices, Gallery 25, Balcony 35, Dress Circle 50, Parquet 75 cents.

He's a Dead Beat.

Several days ago a man giving his name as J. W. Starks, and claiming Silvercreek, Ky., as his place of abode, came to this city, saying he was a piano tuner. He lounged around the city for several days doing but very little work and the instruments he endeavored to repair were left in a worse condition than they were before they received his attention.

He stopped at a boarding-house and stated that he was financially embarrassed, but would receive some money in a few days and would make everything right.

He was daily expecting his trunk, which judging from the manner in which he spoke of it, was as large as a box-car, but the trunk never came. He left very suddenly without any ceremony whatever, very cleverly beating the proprietor of the house where he was stopping, as well as everyone else he could. He is a gilded dead beat and no earthly good.

"The Nabobs."

There have been few better or more thoroughly enjoyable entertainments of the burlesque class seen here than that presented at Washington Opera-house on the 20th of last month by Henshaw and Ten Broeck, several other very capable actors and a bevy of half a dozen as pretty and graceful girls as are ordinarily seen behind the footlights.

Henshaw is brimful of fun and his gags, witty remarks, clever dancing and goods looks kept everybody in rare good humor. His song, "Across the Bridge" was especially well received. He has a good partner in Miss Ten Broeck, a mirthful young woman who can sing, dance and is full of ever-flowing humor and ready wit. There were some fine quartette singing and merry choruses.

This excellent company will return to Washington Opera-house next Monday evening, October 10th, and should be greeted by a crowded house.

WEDDED AT FELICITY.

Gathering of a Remarkable Family at the Marriage of a Member.

Dr. J. S. Simcox of Covington was married Wednesday to Miss Katie Ort at the home of the bride's mother at Felicity, O.

Among those in attendance from this city were Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Ort and family, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ort and family, and George Ort and one of his children.

The Ort family is a remarkable one. The parents—the late George Ort and Mrs. Louise Ort—were former residents of Maysville, where they enjoyed the respect of all who knew them. On the occasion of the recent wedding there were present ten children (five sons and five daughters), five sons-in-law, three daughters-in-law, and eleven grandchildren. One daughter-in-law and three grandchildren were unavoidably absent.

Before separating this interesting family group was photographed, and we dare say there are few families that can compare with it, numerically or physically.

NEATLY CAUGHT

The Wife of President Griffiths Stands Guard,

While Her Husband Robs the Safe of the Anchor Manufacturing Co.

A Detective Springs From His Hiding Place and Confronts the President in the Act—Griffiths Admits His Guilt, and Is Placed in Jail.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 7.—For several months Jas. Fogarty, jr., treasurer of the Anchor Manufacturing Co., has suspected John A. Griffiths, the president of the concern, of crooked work, and Detective Harris was employed to catch him "dead to rights." From an outside place of hiding the officer had on several occasions noticed Griffiths enter the office and emerge shortly afterward. These visits were usually made late at night. Thursday night the officer was stationed in a secluded recess under the stairway. He was in waiting but a short time when Griffiths, accompanied by his wife, entered the office. The couple proceeded to a dark spot near the safe, where they held a whispered conversation. Mrs. Griffiths then walked to a window at the front of the office and anxiously paced to and fro to see that no one was watching the building. In the meantime Griffiths had opened the safe and taken out of it a long envelope. This he placed in an inner pocket of his coat and then proceeded to look over some papers which he had taken from a drawer in a desk near by. He was quite nervous, and at intervals looked around in a suspicious manner to see that his wife was still at her post. He finally replaced the papers and beckoned his wife to come near the safe.

Detective Harris could not understand what they were saying, as they spoke in whispers. He observed Griffiths hand his wife some papers. These she placed in her pocket, while the husband locked the safe. As soon as the detective heard the tumbler of the lock click he sprang forward and caught Griffiths by the neck. The astounded man showed fight, and during the encounter threw the key to the cash drawer down into the cellar. He proved to be a desperate man, but the officer out-matched him. Pulling his gun, Detective Harris commanded Griffiths to throw up his hands. At first Griffiths seemed disposed not to comply with the request, but his wife interfered, fearing her husband would be killed. Until then she had stood as though spell-bound, but the imminent danger of her husband broke the spell and she screamed: "Don't shoot my husband, please. Oh, John, do as he tells you," and up went John's hands.

Treasurer Fogarty, who had been in hiding in the rear part of the building, came forward at this juncture, and the package of money was turned over to him by Griffiths. At the sight of Fogarty Mrs. Griffiths broke down and cried like a child. Her husband made a strong effort to put on a bold front.

"Well, we have caught you at last," said Fogarty sternly, gazing at his partner.

"I was only taking what belonged to me," was Griffiths' defiant reply.

"Griffiths, I've been on your track for the past three months, and you might as well make an open confession to Mr. Fogarty and myself," spoke up Detective Harris.

This request and the gleaming barrel of the detective's revolver seem to completely "cow" Griffiths, and he made a clean breast of his numerous trips to the office, and of the manner in which he had robbed the company.

"It was the gaming table," he said. "I have not lived as I should. I lost heavily gambling—horses and poker have been my ruin. The last races at Latonia settled the business and I guess it is all up with me."

He acknowledged that he had dropped large sums of money in various pool rooms, and particularly at the Latonia race track. Griffiths, in default of $3,000 bail, was committed to jail.
